

Dark Lochnagar

The Corries

Away, ye gray landscapes, ye gardens of roses,
In you let the minions of luxury rove,
And restore me the rocks where the snow-flake reposes,
If still they are sacred to freedom and love.

Brave Caledonia, dear are thy mountains,
Round their white summits the elements war
Though cataracts roar