

Has He Told You That He Loves You Yet

The Courteeners

I've seen him looking over his shoulder
I can see your love getting
Colder and colder
I can see the girls that he
Takes out drinking
I can see the sordid thoughts
That he's thinking

It's written on his face
It's written on his jacket
And the way that his arms are dug deep right
Down in his pockets

He's fumbling around
For an excuse again

Has he told you that he loves you yet
I'm just worried you'll get used again
Has he told you that he loves you yet
He's breaking your heart
He's breaking away for a brand
New start and you can't see

The velvet rut looms large
And stands tall
A pelvic strut and then watch
His eyes crawl
This is not the fairytale you asked for
One day he adores you
The next he lambastes or

Throws a little glare
It used to be a twinkle
And the sweet little nothings that he
Whispered have all but gone away

He's fumbling around
For an excuse again

Has he told you that he loves you yet
I'm just worried you'll get used again
Has he told you that he loves you yet
He's breaking your heart
He's breaking away for a brand
New start and you can't see

Get out girl
Go get out girl
That boy he
Don't deserve you

It's going downhill
Quicker and quicker
He won't hold your hand
And he can't handle his liquor
His empty promises fall on the floor
And he's not far behind

You can't take anymore

It's written on his face
And the curl of your painted lower lip
And we think that you probably
Should just abandon ship

He's fumbling around
For an excuse again

Has he told you that he loves you yet
I'm just worried you'll get used again
Has he told you that he loves you yet
He's breaking your heart
He's breaking away for a brand
New start and you can't see