Revenge On The Nursemaid

The Deadfly Ensemble

1. My nursemaid once gave me a kiss and a farthing. Two pence woul d have made sense; this was alarming. I was a good boy! I never got sick! So this slice of a penny induced a coin trick. 2. I traded my farthing for an old metal soldier which I sold to m y brother, a collector, much older. He gave me a penny which th en begat three when I found for the soldier some staunch compan у. 3. My threepenny bit soon turned to a tanner when I resold some fr uit; some plums and bananas. A half-shilling's worth of shoe po lish came next, and two bob from the bank men left my pockets p erplexed. 4. With florin in hand I set up a stand and sold Penny Dreadfuls a t second hand. Inside of a week I'd made half a crown, and my s tory appraisals had earned some renown. 5. For one sovereign, one guinea, I sold off my stock and found my revenge when the nursemaid was shopping; she cried at the till , "All I need is two pence!" Said I, "All I've got is ten pound , four and six."
