

Avalon

The Dreadnoughts

I lie in centuries grove where the cool wind blows
where the cool wind blows
upon this stone plateau
where the cool wind blows
where the cool wind blows

A dust is falling in the air the murderers are millionaires I will wait to see you there Avalon
Avalon

A young man fell below where flowers grow
row on row
A madman lays the foe
where flowers grow
and the children know bullet shatters naked bone a little girl grows up alone carves your name into the stones of Avalon
Avalon

You are my peace of mind where the river winds where the water shines orchards, hills and vines where water shines
where water shines

You do not belong to anyone when the day is said and done you'll receive your native son
