

Session 03

The Early November

So what you're saying is, he grew up his whole life being tortured practically.
And as soon as he finally gets a taste of what normal life is like, something huge happens, like an unexpected baby.
He gets scared, he thinks he can't do it, so he panics.
And still being a kid himself, he does what any kid should do,
asks his parents for help.
It seems pretty normal to me.

No, you don't understand. You see they didn't just leave him there for a weekend while they got the house straightened up for him.
They left him for weeks, for months. They left him for years.