

The Light Of My Footprints

The Envy

On this road I have tormented as I came, I crouch carrying grudge This foot passed away in comfort deprived in all it has learned Ahead of where I tumble I seize the light I found. Whet it sharp and hide it in the dark of tomorrow

The trails I stepped on were erased with lies at once Give away indiscriminately then lose heart
At the place you wait, no one can stop anymore
All is now and you'll be frightened alone
Let it loose infinitely
What I expect had been manufactured into a different shape
No need to suffer anymore

No need to suffere anymore
You don't need to cry
No need for grief
There is nothing you can do alone now

Mercy songs I kep screaming
I hold it and put it back to the ground
Sometimes I feel uncertain about living Tell countless lies without leaving anything Scrape the loneliness off as much as I can while it's cloudy outside

Sins on my both hands,
punishment to my mind,
I taste fully and shoot them to the sky I'm certainly powerless, I'm not worth and I turn my back even on laughings Authentic words filled up in my hand are old now Can't stop them
Nothing more to lose
I line up without breaking a line of era