

Signs That Will Never Change

The Everly Brothers

Leaves come falling on a winter's day
Robins weep and watch them sail away
Floating on the water now, is autumn's last farewell
These are signs that will never change
Signs that will never change

Rivers once were frozen now they're free
Showing winter's going rapidly
Tadpoles turning into frogs is winter's last farewell
These are signs that will never change
Signs that will never change

The changing faces of the season
Are those that cannot be compared
Except in love it sometimes happens
It blooms but all too soon it dies

Tadpoles turning into frogs is winter's last farewell
These are signs that will never change
Signs that will never change

The changing faces of the season
Are those that cannot be compared
Except in love it sometimes happens
It blooms but all too soon it dies

Leaves are turning brown they fade and die
Geese start flying home across the sky
Nights are getting shorter now and summer's had its day
These are signs that will never change

Signs that will never change
Signs that will never change
