Signs That Will Never Change

The Everly Brothers

Leaves come falling on a winter's day Robins weep and watch them sail away Floating on the water now, is autumn's last farewell These are signs that will never change Signs that will never change

Rivers once were frozen now they're free Showing winter's going rapidly Tadpoles turning into frogs is winter's last farewell These are signs that will never change Signs that will never change

The changing faces of the season Are those that cannot be compared Except in love it sometimes happens It blooms but all too soon it dies

Tadpoles turning into frogs is winter's last farewell These are signs that will never change Signs that will never change

The changing faces of the season Are those that cannot be compared Except in love it sometimes happens It blooms but all too soon it dies

Leaves are turning brown they fade and die Geese start flying home across the sky Nights are getting shorter now and summer's had its day These are signs that will never change

Signs that will never change Signs that will never change