

Lost Humanity

The Foreshadowing

I'll be back at sunrise even farther tonight
Waiting for them to put up a fight.
I hope I won't be afraid when they will come forward
Someone will hide, someone will not.

Once again I am waiting here for them
Hoping, showing them humanity that once they were
Everyday I wait, everyday I live
To meet another man.

I've never felt so alone, it would be enough for one
Winning a war to convert a soul.

Once again I am waiting here for them
Once again to show humanity that once they were.
Every day I pray, I want to be for them
Just another man.

I do not have mercy on me
I do not want to admit
I should swallow all of this hate
And become the very prey.

Once again I am here, in front of them,
Trying to show the enemy I am is just a man
Everyday I wait, everyday I live,
To meet another friend or meet another enemy.

Once again I wait, once again I see
The failure in their hunger, in their blood, over my hopes.
Every day I'm wrong, everyday I get,
Just another dead.
