i built an altar for you out of polaroids and pins on the wall of my room i don't know what to do waiting for you should be a sin out of south station builds me up it's all i can do high as the moon waiting for you to come back to my room i built an altar for you hope you come around those lead to my house i had a question for you telling the truth throws at the sound outside a station builds me up it's all i can do high as the moon waiting for you to come back to my room all i can say is show me some strength come over please your enemies won't get to you waiting to speak days into weeks come over please no enemies outside a station builds me up it's all i can do high as the moon waiting for you to come back to me please come over soon no enemies come over see i'm begging you