

Different Ways, Different Situations

The Idoru

another day, another chance to shake each other's hand. in these days the brand new ways are going to bring us together again now it's time for the rest to rewrite the pages of a book that's written from the start, forget the hatred. from this night on, don't turn your back on me because i want to open the ball and want you to see that i'm ready to heal the wounds that still bleed. let's cross the barriers we've built throughout the years you hold on like a grim death. please look forward and get rid of your standards leave back-breaking fights behind, accept the emotions. let's ride together on high waves of the killer ocean let my words soak your inside, think no more of darkness. why should we be the ones who turn against.
no one can take the wind out of our sails. just hold my hand, don't throw us away