

Hey little girl, don't you know you're too shy
When you say hello, they all say goodbye
Hey little girl, don't you ever learn
When you walk in they all seem to turn
When you walk in they seem to turn
They turn their heads away

Hey little girl, don't you know you're too plain
When you say once more, they say not again
Hey little girl, don't you know it's skin deep
Just when you wake up they all go to sleep
When you wake up they go to sleep
They're all just counting sheep

You never listen to me
You're just a flower on the wall
You never listen to me
You just don't pay attention at all

Hey little girl, isn't it just a shame
The dress rings a bell, but I can't quite place the name
Hey little girl, no, you're not of their kind
When you've got to go they don't seem to mind
When you go they don't seem to mind
They think you're such a bind

Your conversation runs dry
When you smile you just cry deep inside
Your inexperience shows
Which your fashionable clothes just can't hide

Hey little girl don't you know you're too plain
When you say once more they say not again

No, no, no, not again, no, no, not again
