Early Spring

The Mountain Goats

The pictures you paint aren't as pretty as they once seemed to $\ensuremath{\mathsf{me}}$

And the coffee's bitter 'cause it's been boiling too long And the jokes you tell aren't as funny as they once seemed to me

And the songs you sing are just plain hackneyed

But the stars shine down on all God's children And the sun sets on the good on the evil

And I know you And I know you

The throbbing flowers outside, I get it
And the paint peeling from the bathroom walls
And the smile on your face is alive
And the smile on your face is real pretty

And the sun shines down on all God's children And the stars burn for the good and the evil And I know you

And I know you