Belong

The Pains of Being Pure At Heart

What to do, nothing new We tried each other, let's try another When you came through the door, I felt everything and nothing that I had before

Tell yourself it's not yourself But no one else can make me know there's no one else When you came through the door, I was sure you never even felt the floor

I know it is wrong, but we just don't belong In their eyes, in the sun No we just don't belong

Change your mind and stop the time That comes between us, that bends beneath us If you're mine, I don't mind We tried another, let's try each other

I know it is wrong, but we just don't belong In their eyes, in the sun No we just don't belong

In hospitals, in shopping malls With heavy heads and locker walls An empty street at 3 a.m., You told me you're not one of them

We took a vow to never sleep While there was still air left to breathe And you're the same, so slightly strange Among the fakes you knew the pains.