

Don't You Want a Man

The Slackers

Shot down the marchers
On a winter's day
Laying face down on the snow
As their lives ran away

Now the distance between us grows more everyday
Every time I see you
It just makes me wanna say
Don't you want a man anymore?
Don't you need a man anymore?
Don't you love your man anymore?
Don't you want your man anymore?

So the revolution came
And it went away
Everyone was saved my lord
But things pretty much stayed the same

Now the distance between us grows further everyday
(further everyday)
Every time I see you
It just makes me wanna say
Don't you want a man anymore?
Don't you need a man anymore?
Don't you want this man anymore?
Don't you love this man anymore?
Don't you want your man anymore?
Don't you need your man anymore?
Don't you love your man anymore?
Only time will tell

Before this song began
There's a lot of things we could've been
In many ways we were just children
And on these nights as we lay slumbering
We should've opened up our hearts and let each other in

And so the man with a book in his hand
Just turned the page
as another actor cried out
was pulled on off the stage

Now the distance between us grows further everyday
(further everyday)
Every time I see you
It just makes me wanna say
Don't you want a man anymore?
Don't you need a man anymore?
Don't you want your man anymore?
Don't you need your man anymore?
Don't you love your man anymore?
Don't you want this man anymore?
Don't you love this man anymore?
Only time will tell
