

To Just Grow Away

The Tallest Man on Earth

We're melting ruby hearts
A confusing trade
To burn the ore
To shape a blade

Then to swing it low
Beginners fate
To lose a skin
To just grow away

Like a rain to help a river
But a river so hard to please
But I've grown to see the diamonds
You've thrown in just for me

We spent so many nights
Just gathering stones
The silver tears
Old sapphire bones

All the copper leaves
Then dreamt, now true
Look how they find their path
To cut right through

Like a rain to help a river
But a river so hard to please
But I've grown to see the diamonds
You've thrown in just for me

Look when your hopeless child will figure
There are moments when hope's not
Only real when flagging far down a road

With an armful broken arrows
And no hand free for the bow
Your kid will lose a battle
But your ways
Will let him go

I lose my wish to drown
And aimless flee
What you've thrown to lose
Is still right here with me
