The Walkmen

Angela holds a grudge over nothing Angela, what's the difference? Today's a day like any other

Still the flag snaps in the wind Still your name rings true

You took the high road I couldn't find you up there You kept your jaw wired closed

I never noticed before I used to see the signs Now I dream of the time I was holding on to you For a lack of anything to do

Still the white caps roll away Still your name rings true Mine is yours, yours is yours Life goes on, life goes on all around you

Let's go home happy again Just take your head from your hands Take up the cause just once more

I never noticed before I used to see the signs Now I dream of the time I was holding on to you For a lack of anything to do

Back to school Back to work Can this go on forever? Angela, what's the difference? Life goes on all around you
