Turn

Therapy?

Turn and face the strange
The door is open, you're awake you're storming heaven without thought you're storming heaven without god

Remember, I know where you live and I know you're on your own I may forget I don't forgive I'm always home

You turn and face the strange You turn and face yourself

I know when you lie the brightness darkens in your eyes this is yours to take control this is yours now hold your own

Remember, I know where you live And I know you're on your own I may forget I don't forgive I'm always home

You turn and face the strange You turn and face yourself

Barging into the presence of god Barging into the presence of god Barging into the presence of god Barging into the presence of god

You turn, barging into the presence of god You turn, barging into the presence of god You turn, barging into the presence of god You turn, barging into the presence of god You turn, barging into the presence of god