

Flying North

Thomas Dolby

Metal bird dip wing of fire whose airlines comb dark Earth the poles are tether we were born in on thr brink of a whole new deal on the floor of a hotel bar I'm staring right into the light and I'm drawn in like a moth and I'm flying North again...

Here come the men in suits paper waving in the runway glare Lincoln streaming in the chilly air of the morning at the end of a double day at the back of an airport lounge I'm staring down into the cold and I'm warn out like a cloth and I'm flying North again tonight.

Down with the landing gear up goes the useless prayer the poles are tethers we were born in now I'm back in the London night on a bench in a launderette I'm staring right into my face and I'm drawn out like a plot and I'm flying North again tonight.
