

Someday

Too Close To Touch

It's the way, it's the way that you've always had your thumb on me
Pushing down to make me feel so empty
Every sound every taste. Is soured by the energy you spoil
While you're drowning in a dream that capsized

But that doesn't phase you at all
The light at the end of the hall
Is starting to dim while you reach for
Your life vest and learn how to swim

Oh, someday I will be something
You will be somewhere, that you're just out of reach
Oh, someday I will be somewhere
You will need something, but you never believed in me

Sell the lie, sell the life. I believed you
Got the hook, you got the line
Forget the ones you leave behind
I wait, for answers
No more debating on whether I'm worth the time of day
A cynic never listens anyway
But that doesn't phase you at all
The light at the end of the hall
When push comes to shove
Think you're so far above, make me doubt what I love

Oh, someday I will be something
You will be somewhere, that you're just out of reach
Oh, someday I will be somewhere
You will need something, but you never believed in me
Oh you never believed
Wait and see, wait and see

How could you say you cared?
When all you did was disappear
We learned our fault, and picked ourselves back up
Won't let you kill our souls
Nowhere left to go, we refuse to fold
Oh you wait and see

Oh, someday I will be something
You will be somewhere, that you're just out of reach
Oh, someday I will be something
You will be somewhere, that you're just out of reach
Oh, someday I will be somewhere
You will need something, but you never believed in me
