

Eternal Sleep

Touch of Eternity

Ground is cracking under my bare feet
Had to come wander through the night again
Morning has left its frost to tease me away, this lonely shadow
Under these evergreens no ray of sun will ever shine

Over me the tops so high, under me, ground so soft
Light fading away slowly crawling are shadows
Silently the ground whispers me, I feel I want to sleep
Forget all the sorrow's chains, leave this pain behind

Did I ever tell I regret everything I did
Only wish of mine, to get all that back
Weeping is the sky before us, I don't even care
The ground is calling me, for eternal sleep
Will a light ever come back to life of mine so gray
There's no time, there's no will, I fade away
Will you ever come back and say you loved me
Give me a spark before I fall asleep

The sky's stars, the moaning moon
Dark depths of this forest, my cradle
Falling, slowly
Shall I never share another tear

A new chance somewhere far away will it wait for me?
A new chance to suffer all these darkened days again
I don't need no empathy because this feels like a home
To the hands of mother earth I sink, spending a night
