Love Song Requiem

Trading Yesterday

Emily will find a better place to fall asleep

She belongs to fairy tales that I could never be

The future haunts with memories that I could never have

And hope Is just a stranger wondering how it's got so bad

I die each time you look away
My heart, my life will never be the same
This love will take my everything
One breath, one touch will be the end of me

You could be the final straw that brings me back to earth Ever-waiting airports full of the love that you deserve Wishing I could find a way to wash away the past Knowing that my heart will break, but at least the pain will last

I die each time you look away My heart, my life will never be the same This love will take my everything One breath, one touch will be the end of me

Emily will find a better place to fall asleep Maybe she will save me in the oceans of her dream And maybe someday love

Maybe someday love
