Kareen

Treble Charger

You're dragging me along I cannot hold it You say it's what you are Your staring scares me

Antagonize your fears, your longing You're setting out your fears, you're falling I turn my back on you You're far too clever now

Kareen is calling out her name She disappeared beneath her pain But noone's listening Noone's listening

I contradict myself You did not need it You gave up from the start So where's that leave me?

And what I'd like to know is easy If it's your right, than don't believe me I turn my back on you You're far too clever now

Reckless leap to try once more It's really not that strange You'll learn to be adored And not to be ashamed
