

In A Song

Trespassers William

What if all I want is not so hard after all?
I've spent too many days wanting
If it's just wildflowers that we could pick
And set on the table and look at in the morning

I see it when you do just what I said
And I don't feel then that my heart
Knows the difference

"Let me sleep," is all that you ask of me
But I can't remember a dream that didn't scare me
So what if it's just one sentence
That you must not have heard in a song
Cause it's too honest and flawed

I see it when you do just what I said
And I don't feel then that my heart
Knows the difference

Next time, will I not imagine
I know how you could save me
And love me enough?
Next time, will I not imagine
You have something
To soothe me that
I've never had?
