Bird 1

Underworld

Bat bit and ten (?) White stick with a red light Floats past her on the right White stick on the rock Roping in the wind Are you hungry?

Do you know what to eat Floating in the blue I hear you your voice It comes out above my head Close to you, close to you

There is one bird in my house She said you woke up from a dream He heard Mama Cass He felt better if I would have known (those) things It damped his mood for a second Then he remembered where he was He regained his perspective That felt a Lot better

It gets much better He laid down on his bed With the front door open And the sunlight flooding into the room He smelt tire He laid back listening to a fly

He saw washing hanging In the sun He caught a fleeting glimpse of a man moving uphill pursued by a bus He saw a white church with a Three blue-domed roof A crucifix on the top And an ant walked Along the edge of his book He heard another bell And a (braying mustache(?)) And a moped started up Sounding like a chainsaw of tiny firecrackers And he smelled tire again A fly came dim Along the shaft of sunlight Coming through the open door He watched it cross the room And get halfway and then it Turned around and left, he laughed

There is one bird in my house
