

Living Water

Vancouver Sleep Clinic

I'd felt alone
I'd lost control
And everything I dreamed
I let go

Emotionless
I wouldn't let you in Making me blind to what I loved

So I washed up on the shoreline
To chase the city lights
Sold my voice to the people
But nothing changed inside

Pushed away from the angels
To the comfort of strangers
In their arms I faded
Feeling further on my own
I'm coming home

In the moments of emotion
Through all the highs and all the lows
I have scoured all the world
And nothing fills me
Like your love

In a beautiful surrender
In a bittersweet farewell
It took too long to find the words
But you are all
I ever want

I know, cause you're moving me inside
I know, cause I finally feel alive

My strength was gone
I was not unbreakable
Anything I held was hollow
I gave it all for the promised land
And left the living water
Crossed the world with these empty hands
To find I'm nothing on my own

And I know that I failed a thousand times
In the end you're the only hope I find
