Different Worlds

Vandenberg

Things weren't so natural in the beginning We just let our hearts beat, this was love We lived from one day to another, the difference didn't bother us at all Then the day came, you took me home to your place I still can see them stare at my face, oh

We should not be apart, just listen to your heart Different worlds keep us apart Then, from that day on, things were changing I could feel love slipping through my hands You started listening to their talking, suddenly one morning yo u were gone We shouldn't have lost, though we're from different worlds But you should let love show you the way, instead of them
