

A Deeper Gray

Venin Noir

daylight is closing my eyes for the last time I can barely see what you seek I can barely hear what you speak daylight is coming to end my suffering I can barely live as I lived I can barely cry when I breathe my eyes can see just a deeper gray blood is burning inside of me pain is dancing in front of me lies are laughing at my tears harm is increasing throughout the years so give up on me

shall I now say farewell for our future has been denied for our tears have all been cried the dawn is about to come daylight will bring deliverance and my payback I can barely wait for my last I can barely move from my chair daylight is near me but I can't hear I can barely keep track of time (I can barely hear) I can barely ask what is mine (I can barely hear) my eyes are blurred by this deeper gray

so give up on me
shall I now say farewell
for our lives have done us apart in me
shall I now say farewell
for our lives have done us apart the dawn comes so alone all I can see is a deeper gray