

Overreacting

We Are Scientists

Everything I know you know
There's nothing left here to decode
So put away all of your keys
And just agree to let things mean
Exactly what they mean
I don't know what makes this hard
Regardless of how great things are
You confuse sincerity
With pointing out the tragedy
In every little thing

One too many overreactions
One too many overreactions
One too many overreactions [x2] (show me where it hurts)
One too many overreactions [x2] (show me where it hurts)

You never learn
Knowing is just not enough
When all of this keeps blowing up
And breathlessness won't make this news
I guess this is the way we choose
To keep ourselves amused

One too many overreactions
One too many overreactions
One too many overreactions (show me where it hurts)
One too many overreactions (show me where it hurts)

You never learn
We're going over the same things
So I won't say it again
But, how come so many things
That seem essential
Don't affect you, at all?

One too many overreactions
One too many overreactions
One too many overreactions (show me where it hurts)
One too many overreactions (show me where it hurts)
You never learn