

The Fall

Wendy Rule

I fall, I fall
Into the darkest hole I fall
And I move
Move as though my skin were scales
As though the soil was water
And I was the wave
As though the soil was water
And everywhere the sapphire sea
Was life, was life was life
And the ocean was singing to me

I fall, I fall
Into the darkest hole I fall
And I move
Move as though the sky and sea
Were no longer separate
And the waves that wash over me
Were no longer separate
And the waves that wash over me
Were alive, alive, alive
With a force that I cannot see

I fall, I fall
Into the darkest hole, I fall
And I move
Any way I want to move
As though my fingers were feathers
And I could fly to the moon
As though my fingers were feathers
And everywhere I looked was night
And my eyes, my eyes, my eyes
They could see where there was no light
