

Release Me

Willie Nelson

I heard the old man say we need the rain
And I can feel it in my bones they're aching
I watched the sky and wait and wish these waters ease my pain
Because my will is breaking

If you get next to me and help me find simplicity
Then you could be the one to take me,
To break me and find my soul

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me)
Waiting for your love
Oh to free me, so release me

Grey clouds, they infiltrate as every move you make
Gets me closer to clarity
While droplet drummers lead a complex beat increasing speed
Somehow accompanies our intensities

At first this cloud burst is pulling us under Lightning and thunder, rain falls and you take me under
And find my self

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me)
Waiting for your love
Oh to free me, so release me

So take off your shoes and stay awhile
This might be the right time tonight
If it makes you feel good
Then it makes me feel alright

We should take down the curtains now
And make blankets here on the floor
The torrential downpour, the potential for more
I seize to fight this tension that ignites us in the dark
Cause tension causes friction and this friction leads to sparks

The rain has filled this cup and, before it over flows,
I wanna take you in now here it goes

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me)
Waiting for your love
Oh to free me, so release me

Could you be the one to release me? (oh release me)
We have just begun
You release me, oh release me
