Angel De La Barthe

At dusk she always disappeared The neighbours had no idea where They only knew what people talked After sin and lust they said she walked

For years and years she could keep the secret Before some nosy parishers found out Why she had been shunning light For almost three years

Angel de la Barthe - she was a devil's whore Angel - his offspring to this world she had borne Angel de la Barthe - she was a Satan's tart Angel - her perversions had been fed with blood

Into the woods she had wondered Night after night lust she hungered To taste the platin horn she could Do what few women would

For two years the monster son With a wolf's head and a devil's tail Had been alive feasting Upon the flesh of babies

Angel did you know where all this would lead? From the moment of passion into the fire If only he could come and save you now But he's waiting for your soul to come down and feed His desires
