Entropy

Wolfsheim

A melting star run through my fingers Blood red furrows on the sea Was it wind that never lingers Or, was it you who never came

Standing on the store A distant call Golden waves appear And take me home

Cover me, oh noonday sun So my heart could carry on A morning new is soon to come Serenity has yet begun

I am sick for I'm a sinner All I attempt is in vain The spring of ice is growing clearer In silent storms of entropy

Anger swept away Be firm with me Furtive entity Our time has come
