Doomed By Howling Winds

Xasthur

The wind cast a ruin upon my soul.

The night is dying, yet we cursed the dawn, each mourning, upon a festering grave.

The moonlight has no shine through the doom.

The burning corpse of god shall keep us warm in the doom of howling winds

For we are a race from beyond the wanderers of night.