Lesson Learned

Yellowcard

It's six in the morning, You still haven't slept yet You're tired from all yesterday, But all you can do is Just try to wake up And prepare for what tomorrow will bring, It's cold out it's raining, No one to complain Just wishing the time will go by Sitting here anxious a touch too ambitious So tell me what time do we end This on going process 'Cause someday you'll have to begin, Working your ass off while they sit relaxing

Do the same thing day after day Working only 'cause i do it the right way And soon these things will change You lost all you live in the world underneath (2x)

Woke up this morning You realized it's okay You're taking some time to just look at the sky The sun is still shining, I realize that life isn't working from six And not thinking twice, You still got your brain and You still got your brain and You still got your life, But your running out of things all the time Misunderstaments about how we live Running around all the time

One day these thoughts will come together, One day this shit will work out fine. It's just like they said it, but it seems like forever, Yes I'm distorted a blur in your mind, And the ever race you run, it's only with yourself. Overcome the obstacles you just you need you, Nobody else