

Transmission Home

Yellowcard

I'm here, reaching out again
Lean into the wind on my knees
My fear is a memory
It's a memory you have for me

I want to take this right from my head
I want to build something with my hands

I will send a transmission home
To say that I've been out here too long alone
And I want to come down now
I will send a transmission home
To say I should have called in so long ago
And I want to come down

Life comes at the speed of light
But there's a patient time for me when
Love runs into every day
Over every place that I've been

I want to wipe these stars from my eyes
I want to search and see what I find

I will send a transmission home
To say that I've been out here too long alone
And I want to come down now
I will send a transmission home
To say I should have called in so long ago
And I want to come down

I will send a transmission home
To say that I've been out here too long alone
And I want to come down now
I will send a transmission home
To say I should have called in so long ago
And I want to come down now
