Standing here on sacred ground Some days it's a mad world let it be Words of promise fill the air, empty voices How long have we waited?

And every time I hold your hand You bring to me this promised land I live for you, this promised land

Take me there and back again Some days it's a sad world let it be What's the point of looking for this power divine? It's already in my changes

And every time I hear your voice I realize I have a choice To live again, I deserve this choice, to live again

Our hand will be now You are the song from the book of time To realize what is yours is mine we are meant to be All because our love has always been

You are the center of my day You are my guide in every way we are meant to be All because our love has always been there Giving me the light, yes it's been there, giving me the light

Second nature sings to me
Some days it's a dark world let it be
I define my right to be
I can follow those who've lost their vision

And every time I hold your hand You redesign my promised land I live for you, this promised land, I live for you

You are the song from the book of time To realize what is yours is mine We are meant to be All because our love has always been

You are the center of my day
You are my guide in every way we are meant to be
All because our love has always been there
Giving me the light, yes it's been there giving me the light

You are the song from the book of time To realize what is yours is mine We are meant to be All because our love has always been

You are the center of my day
You are my guide in every way we are meant to be
All because our love has always been there
Giving me the light, yes it's been there giving me the light

Give love each day, give love each day Give love each day, give love each day Give love each day Give love each day, give love each day Give love each day, give love each day Give love each day
