

A World That Is Learning

Zebra

Their words are killing you
Your fear is part of their agenda
You feel them shaking you
And if you question their offended

Can you really risk the failure of never being wrong
Can you really take the chance
That you just don't belong to

A world that is searching to find
A world that is learning that everyone is blind
A world that is searching to find
A world that is learning

TV is changing you
You lock the doors and seal the windows
You feel so paranoid
It's like your dead before they get you

Can you really risk the failure of never being wrong
Can you really take the chance
That you just don't belong to

A world that is searching to find
A world that is learning that everyone is blind
A world that is searching to find
A world that is learning we're running out of time

This world is killing you
You've lost control of all your senses
The speed is shaking you
Things change so fast you can't remember

Should you play it say and write somebody else's songs
Or write your own though there's a chance
That you just don't belong to

A world that is searching to find
A world that is learning that everyone is blind
A world that is searching to find
A world that is learning that we're running out of time

A world that we just can't afford
With half of us counting on the coming of the Lord
A world that is searching for love
A world that is yearning
